Guest post written by Hugh Thompson

Hugh Thompson is chairman of the RSA Conference, chief security strategist at People Security and an adjunct professor at Columbia University, where he teaches courses on computer security.

Earlier this year I got the chance to play a round of the popular call-your-bluff game Balderdash with a few thousand security experts at RSA Conference, the world's largest information security gathering. Thanks to Google and a few of my computer science students at Columbia University, the game, I'm sorry to say, was rigged.

If you're not familiar with Balderdash, players try to convince each other that their definition of some esoteric term
